The President’s Message:

GREETINGS fellow Tsintzinians- members, family and friends- Yia sas, kai haras sas! !!!!

Some of you were present in July 2008 and although we did not have record breaking numbers- our party was a success because of the GEORGE LASKARIS family reunion— and they showed up in record numbers and brought with them old, new and missing relatives. They made our party.

I sincerely hope that other branches of our Tsintzinian family can hold several mini-family reunions this year. The United States, Greece and the world are all in a state of flux presently but being a SURVIVOR is part of our rich heritage. Our predecessors have always survived a crisis. I don’t intend to get political, but I am sure that our new President will not mind if I borrow his phrase YES WE CAN. OF COURSE WE CAN——you don’t need a passport to come to Jamestown. Fill up your cars and vans. We have discounts at many hotels-Best Western offering the same “Laskaris” rates as last summer. Our relatives gathered in Celeron during world wars, the depression and other crises.

The most important thing each of us can do at this time is to ENJOY each other’s company. The festivities start on Thursday and end with Sunday brunch. We never run out of food or music. We expect to see our repeaters, old faces, new ones and some temporarily missing “family” members.

I also want to personally thank those of you who have prepaid your 2009 dues and gave a little extra. We very much appreciate your financial support.

All roads lead to Jamestown and the Buffalo airport is not that far away. The Board wishes all of you good health, a great Easter and please give me the pleasure of greeting you in person this summer. Me agape,

Peter Brasidas Nickles- President
son of Brasidas (Bill) Nickles and Nella Nickles nee Kanaras

Blast From My Past

Stephanie Schlick

I finally listened to the exhortations of Peter Nickles and the rantings of Pauline Costianes. I returned to Jamestown. I was hesitant about going. In my mind, I was the only person who had changed in the 30-some years since I last attended the convention. The people of my generation were fixed in my memory—all young, beautiful, and proud of their Greek heritage.

I am now middle-aged, married, and fat. I am a member of the generation who still remembers when a girl danced in line next to a boy more than once, their yia yias would discuss their grandchildren’s merits and, being Greeks, their character flaws.

Times change. I married a non-Greek who braves the dance floor, learning as he goes, a man who embraces Greek culture. In other words, he is happy to assimilate, and I am grateful.

Tsintzina Society has changed, but only a little. We are still an exclusive society. Three, four, or five generations off the boat, we trace our lineage to three small villages in Greece. I am proud to be a society member. It gives my WASP friends with lineages stretching back to antiquity from all over the world something to envy. I am also proud that we embrace other great cultures who have mixed with our own.

What did my husband and I find when we ventured back to my own hectare of the Peloponnesus in New York? A place full of Tsintzinians who held out their arms to us, welcoming us back like long-lost relatives. We saw pictures of my grandmother as a young woman taken during the first years after her immigration. We saw pictures of my aunts and uncles as children. We met new people and reconnected with old friends and relatives. Familiarity, time, and distance ceased to matter.

What mattered was that we had returned. The years between my last visit and this one melted away. As I spoke to the old ones who return to Jamestown year after year, I experienced clearly the community who draws them back. As I watched the young ones proudly celebrating their heritage, I saw our society’s future. In my heart, I sensed a vital present that deserves to be honored, nurtured, and supported even in these tough times.

What did we do at Jamestown? We did what every Tsintzinian does, or should do, once a year. We ate for the starving children in the village who would love to have that fill-in-the-blank. We stayed up until the wee hours chatting with family and friends. We relied on the energy of celebrating heritage as a substitute for sleep. And we danced. We whirled, embraced by Tsintzinians who are our family because they are my people.
Major Fires Dance to Within a Mile of Tsintzina

By Tom Costas

As you may recall, major forest fires ravaged Greece, and especially the Peloponnesus in 2007. On my recent trip there, I saw first hand the enormous devastation.

Zupena had fire right up to the edge of town, but miraculously, no homes were lost. The road from Zupena to Tsintzina revealed the tremendous scope of fire damage to the forests. At some points, as far as the eye could see, 360° around the vast vistas of the surrounding mountains, only the charred remains of burned and consumed trees could be seen. The destruction and ruin of the fire damage on these mountainsides was nearly unbelievable.

The fires miraculously stopped 1-2km (1 mile) from Tsintzina. However, from every vantage point within town, you can see fire damage on the far mountaintops.

The government has taken steps to control soil erosion by laying larger fire scorched trees horizontal on the hillsides. It will take generations for these forests to make any real recovery.

He then developed 22 Holiday Inns across the east coast and co-developed Toftrees Golf Club and Resort, the first planned community in the state of Pennsylvania.

Renovated Gym to be Dedicated Lambros Arena

On February 21, 2009, Hartwick College will honor one of its own. The newly renovated gymnasium in Binder Physical Education Center will be christened Lambros Arena in honor of a man who has left an indelible mark on the facility, the College, and his native Oneonta: Nick Lambros ’59.

The arena will be dedicated at halftime of the men’s varsity basketball game against Stevens Institute of Technology. The women’s team will tip off against Stevens at 2 p.m., to be followed by the men’s game at 4 p.m. After the action on the court, the Wick Athletic Association will host a donor reception, tribute dinner, and roast in Lambros’ honor. Those who have contributed at least $50 to the fundraising effort for Lambros Arena will be invited to attend what will no doubt be a raucous event.

Called perhaps the best all-around athlete the area has ever produced, Oneonta native Lambros led the Hartwick men’s basketball team to 353 wins in his storied 21-year career as head coach. This impressive run included seven 20-win seasons, seven NCAA appearances--reaching the Final Four in 1988--and seven berths in the ECAC Post Season Tournament. The National Association of Basketball Coaches and other organizations, including the Basketball Coaches Association of New York, named him Coach of the Year.

Lambros also coached golf, tennis, and baseball at Hartwick. He was inducted into the New York State Basketball Hall of Fame in 2004, and was the first inductee into the Hartwick College Athletic Hall of Fame in 1995. Before making his mark at Hartwick, Lambros was a successful junior varsity and varsity basketball coach at his other alma mater, Oneonta High School.

“St. James Episcopal Church was the setting for the wedding of Mary Carayianis, Stamford, Connecticut, to George H. Lambros, Oneonta, NY, on January 16, 1949. The new Mrs. Lambros is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stavros and Ioanna Carayianis of Athens Greece. George is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lambros, 12 Roosevelt Avenue, Oneonta, NY. Following the double ring ceremony, a large reception was held at the Windsor Hotel. The newlyweds spent their honeymoon in Florida and then returned to make their home at 185 West Street, Oneonta, NY”.

Please join George H. and Mary Lambros’s daughters JoAnn Pavlostathis, Kathy Curran, Georgia Lambros, Donna Foti, their husbands Spyros P, Tyrone C. and Vince F., as well as their grandchildren Alexandra and Georgia Pavlostathis, John, Tom and Christopher Curran, Joanna and George Foti in congratulating George and Mary on their 60th wedding anniversary.

George was the owner of the Diana restaurant, located across from Bresees Department Store for over 72 years. Shortly after WW I George’s father Harry, who had emigrated from Greece, opened a Billiard parlor, which soon became Diana’s Sweets.

In 1927 the confectionary became the Diana Restaurant, known for the next 60 years for its good food as well as being the prime Main Street gathering spot for prominent local businessmen, workers, shoppers, professors and students until George retired. Until his death, a day never passed without Ed Moore, the Oneonta Star and town historian having lunch at Diana’s listening attentively to the always animated and often humorous conversations of local “movers and shakers” gathered around the back corner tables. Few will forget Diana’s famous Lasagna, Greek baked chicken and potatoes or the “La Monica Burger” named after Frank “Dizzer” LaMonica, owner of LaMonica Beverages.

Mary Lambros came to the United States shortly after World War II. She lived and worked in Stamford, CT with relatives where her father had been a prominent businessman in the early 1900’s. Because of a visit to Oneonta to see her Uncle Gus Chronis (owner of Laskaris Restaurant, current site of the Corfu) and his wife Antonia Laskaris (Co-owner of the JoAnn Dress Shop, current site the the Oneonta historical society), George met Mary and was instantly smitten. They married a year later. Once their children were all in school in the 1960’s, Mary joined George at Diana’s and because of her graciousness and warmth became a favorite of loyal customers.

Three generations of the Lambros family worked there. George and his sister Helen Stam, Wife of Sam Stam, began working for their Dad in the early 1940’s and worked together until George sold the business in 1991. Their siblings Angie Bertuzzi, well known real estate agent and wife of Post Master Sam Bertuzzi and younger brother Oneonta High and Hartwick College coach, Nick Lambros also worked as youngsters at Diana’s.

We wish them many more years of happiness surrounded by friends and family!

Tsintzinians: This Year, Invite your Relatives and Close Family Friends, Koumbari to the Convention

During the General Assembly meeting at the Convention in 2008, the Tsintzinian Membership approved the major change to attendance policy to permit officially the attendance of “guests” at the 2009 convention. Guests are generally defined as close family and family friends and Koumbari of Tsintzinian Society members.

The cost for each guest to attend will be $35 for each day attended. Ticket provides full access to the dinner-dance, all daily activities and our facility. (Membership eligibility remains as defined by the by-laws. Accordingly, e.g., guests may not vote in the general assembly, nominate or be nominated for/serve as a trustee.)

So, invite your guest friends and relatives this year to join us in Jamestown. Let’s make it a great reunion in 2009!!

This is what Jamestown and the Tsintzina Reunion is all about!!

George and Angie Laskaris Celebrate 60th Anniversary

George Laskaris, son of Alex and Niconia Laskaris of Wilmington, Delaware, and Angeline Nicholakis, daughter of Peter and Sophia Nickolakis of Cambridge, Ohio, were married in a winter ceremony in Cambridge, Ohio on January 9, 1949. They met at the Tsintzina Convention where both attended for many years before and after the marriage.

The family of George and Angie, Alex and Sarah with sons Brian and wife Melissa and Stephen along with Pete and Helen with sons Athan and Nick, wish them many more years of health and love as the foundation and guidance of the Laskaris family.
Hi Everyone,

I tried an experiment - putting my Jamestown home movies on Youtube. Since I didn’t dance much, I took videos of the dancing.

They are searchable typing “Jamestown 2008” or “Jamestown Greek” etc — here are the direct links:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=odpnAxpLFms

Part I — http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ay8Av87YuDA&fmt=18

Part II — http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=odpnAxpLFms&fmt=18

Part III - http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8mY9QgFcWms&fmt=18

You can see I added an &fmt=18 to each link - that brings up the high quality version automatically. With Youtube, video quality is never great, even in HQ mode, but good enough to see everyone. The audio was surprisingly clear for a tiny CyberShot DSC-T70 hybrid still/video camera. You can click the little icon at bottom right of the video window to make it fullscreen.

Hope you enjoy, and again let me know if these being public poses a problem to anyone.

Tsintzina – The place to be seen

By Tom Costas

During my visit to Tsintzina in November, I learned that Tsintzina is turning into quite the weekend getaway for upwardly mobile Athenians and others. According to people in the know, celebrities and Greek yuppies have discovered our little town and during peak summer weekends, entertainment news crews descend to capture images of the who’s who spending the weekend. To accommodate this surging interest, there is a big new hotel under construction just on the edge of town, at the main entry road intersection.

Activity was still evident even in November. To park near the plateia, I had to compete with hotel guest Maserati’s and Range Rovers for parking spaces. There was plenty of construction activity, homes being improved and the stone road through town was being rebuilt and cobbled down by the basketball court. Rest assured, the town is lovelier than ever.

If You have Property in Greece – Better Register it

By Tom Costas

If you own property anywhere in Greece, you need to register the property with the Greek Land registry. That means, if you have farms, fields, houses, or family properties, you need to take action.

Greece has been slowly creating up-to-date digital registries of properties which have long been unregistered. Deadlines for most of the large municipalities have expired.

While the deadline for Zupena and Tsintzina property has not been set (as of 12/08), they will be shortly. The municipality of Sparta deadline was this past autumn.

The process ranges from complicated and frustrating to unmanageable and nearly impossible. Still, you have to get started. You have to 1) establish ownership (there are various methods), 2) accept inheritance (if necessary), 3) pay any taxes (usually 0 or low amounts) 4) survey the property, 5) register the property, 6) get a tax ID, and 7) file an E-9.

If helpful, we can have a seminar at the convention this summer. Let us know if this is of interest.
